We use original art reference from the Disney Archives. Our animators (including some of the films' original animators) review the sculptures, asking: "Are the emotions, expressions, gestures and movements truthful to our characters and stories?" Our expert painters select colors that reflect the same subtle hues as the original animation. Only then, is the Walt Disney Classics Collection backstamp fired into place. A Certificate of Authenticity, signed by Roy E. Disney for The Walt Disney Studios, accompanies each sculpture and promises it has been created using the same exacting animation principles and painstaking standards that Walt Disney himself applied to each frame of every classic animated film.

A LETTER FROM THE STUDIO

What's wrong with this picture? Actually, nothing. You're seeing correctly. That's me with two identical twin boys in the apron pocket of giant overalls. Welcome to the world of Honey, I Blew Up the Kid.

Let me explain. In July, Walt Disney Pictures will be releasing the sequel to the 1989 hit Honey, I Shrunk the Kids. This time, inventor Wayne Szalinski, played again by Rick Moranis, inadvertently enlarges his three-year-old son Adam to proportions not seen since Godzilla. At one point in the film, the boy reaches a height of 112 feet and goes stomping down the middle of the Las Vegas strip.

Which is why you see me in the giant pocket. This was one of the props that was constructed to show Adam once he was the size of a small skyscraper.

As for the twins, they're Daniel and Joshua Shalikar and, together, they play Adam. You see, three-year-olds need their rest, so we had the two boys trade off acting duties during the making of the film. I don't think even their mother can tell which one is on the screen at any given moment.

Honey, I Blew Up the Kid is in the same wacky spirit as the original film...only this time, Wayne Szalinski's attempts at scientific invention don't just disrupt a peaceful backyard, but threaten to terrorize an entire city. Las Vegas has been the scene of some pretty extraordinary goings-on, but nothing quite like this.

I hope you'll be able to join us for some big laughs and giant fun when Honey, I Blew Up the Kid comes to a theater near you this July.

Jeffrey Katzenberg

Chairman of The Walt Disney Studios

A brief note: Along with The Disney Channel's second annual "Thank You Week" (May 3-10) comes this special, three-month summer issue of The Disney Channel Magazine. We'll resume our regular bimonthly schedule with our next issue, August/September 1992.

DISNEY CARVES OUT AWONDERFUL NEW WORLD OF FINE SCULPTURE

Serious Disney collectors are getting a rare treat. The first phase of the Walt Disney Classics Collection has just been released and already the response has been tremendous. Inspired by incredible consumer demand, the artisans of The Walt Disney Studios have created these fine, handcrafted figurines in the same way they've historically created their animation — with meticulous attention to detail. As a result, each piece sparkles with the same magical "illusion of life" as its animated counterpart. The first phase includes characters from Bambi, Cinderella, Fantasia and The Delivery Boy and is available at fine collector locations, the Disney theme parks and The Disney Store. For more information, please call 818-566-8586 or write to Walt Disney Classics Collection, The Walt Disney Studios, 500 S. Buena Vista, Burbank, CA 91521-6876.

NEWS FROM AROUND THE WORLD OF DISNEY

A Legacy of Excellence DISNEY EDUCATIONAL PRODUCTIONS

From the days when it made World War II training films to its contemporary curriculum-based programs for schools, libraries, and government and social services agencies, Disney Educational Productions has evolved into a premiere force in the educational arena. Combining the magic of Disney with research gathered from the nation's top curriculum specialists and trend-setting organizations, Disney Educational Productions blends entertainment with education.

Among the subjects covered in films and videos from Disney Educational Productions are language arts, social sciences, music education, health and safety, science and nature, and personal guidance. Coming this summer, for example, is a new release in the area of recreational safety: Safety on Wheels, which teaches basic safety for skate boarders, roller skaters and bicyclists.

For more information on Disney Educational Productions and its offerings, which are available to schools, libraries and institutions only, call (800) 621-2131.

Walt Disney Records

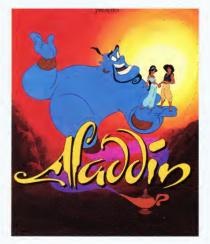

With country & western music enjoying immense popularity around the nation. Walt Disney Records introduces a new entry in the field—Country Kids, an album that's sure to find a new home of its own at the top of the charts.

Country Kids is the first allstar compilation album of country music for kids. It features a blend of traditional and original songs, with the musical styles ranging from bluegrass to Bakersfield. The roster of artists includes 1992 Grammy Award winner Mary-Chapin Carpenter and country legends Glen Campbell, Merle Haggard, Buck Owens, Emmy Lou Harris, and Earl Scruggs, among others. Country Kids is filled with breakthrough children's songs. It's bound to be the children's music hit of the year.

From Walt Disney Pictures SNEAK PREVIEW OF AN UPCOMING ANIMATED MUSICAL

With Beauty and the Beast, The Walt Disney Studios achieved an unparallelled double triumph in film history: the picture not only became the highest earning animated feature ever, but also garnered the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Best Picture nomination. (Beauty and the Beast won two Academy Awards, for Original Score and Best Song.) And for all the millions who were thrilled and enthralled by the film, take note: Disney animators are putting the finishing touches on Aladdin, which is scheduled for a November/Holiday release.

In addition to the work of such animators as Glen Keane, Andreas Deja, and Eric Goldberg, Aladdin boasts three songs by Alan Menken and the late Howard Ashman, the Oscar-winning musical geniuses behind The Little Mermaid and Beauty and the Beast. There are also three musical numbers from Alan Menken and his new partner Tim Rice.

In the meantime, this summer you can enjoy the theatrical re-release of one of Disney's most celebrated and beloved masterworks: Pinocchio will be arriving at a theater near you on June 26.

Adventures in Wonderland MARK MOTHERSBAUGH: A MUSICIAN IN WONDERLAND

Like a zany professor in a crazy musical laboratory, Mark Mothersbaugh is surrounded by row upon row of keyboards. As music producer of Adventures in Wonderland, he is responsible for scoring the entire 65 episodes, including four original tunes per show.

"I'm really having a great time," Mothersbaugh explains calmly. "It's fun to paint in broad musical strokes—we've got everything from Renaissance court music to rhythm and blues and country." He adds, "I couldn't do it alone. We've got an incredible team of composers, songwriters, and musicians."

Mothersbaugh is renowned as the founder of the rock group DEVO. His credits also include stints with The Rolling Stones, Sheena Easton, and Deborah Harry.

Since his days of madcap glory, Mothersbaugh has kept quite busy as the composer behind films, television shows, and major commercials. As to the group of composers that he has assembled for Adventures in Wonderland, Mothersbaugh says, "Everybody's having such a good time making music for this show—I never thought being the boss could be this much fun."

Spectacular grace in fine bone china

Dance of the Dolphins...superbly handcrafted.

They are the playful children of the sea, diving and weaving through the waters, disappearing beneath the waves. Then, from the ocean's depths, they leap for joy in a spectacular display.

Now, all the grace of these marvelous animals is portrayed in a work of art in pure white bone china and a touch of gold. Dance of the Dolphins is a showpiece of elegance and enchantment. Lenox artistry beautifully interprets the sleek lines of the dolphins, the tossing waves, the sense of ease and pleasure in their world. Dramatic from any angle, your imported sculpture will have its own gleaming black hardwood base to show it to its very best advantage.

Sunday Night Showcase THE 25TH MONTREUX MUSIC FESTIVAL

As host Al Jarreau notes, it all began as a small jazz festival in Montreux, Switzerland. The Montreux festival soon branched out to include rock and pop music, and 25 years later is, as Jarreau observes, "the biggest and most prestigous festival of its kind in the world." What makes Montreux so magical is the intimacy shared among the performers and a highly partisan crowd.

The 25th Montreux Music Festival captures the highlights of the 1991 event—and demonstrates the sheer breadth and depth of talent that has helped make the Montreux Festival a music mecca. The performers include the brilliant songwriting team of Ashford and Simpson, jazz guitarist George Benson, Sting and Elvis Costello (both performing their early hits), Bonnie Raitt, the Moody Blues, and two men whose names are synonymous with both the blues and musical mastery: Ray Charles and B.B. King.

THE 25TH MONTREUX MUSIC FESTIVAL, A WORLD TELEVISION PREMIERE, SUNDAY, MAY 10, AT 9:00 P.M.

counts the adventures of Martians who invade Big Bean, Illinois. The Disney Channel Premiere Film Danny, The Champion of the World stars Oscar winner Jeremy Irons, his son Sam, and Irons's father-in-law Cyril Cusack. It airs June 21 (and Father's Day).

The Best of Hollywood GOTTA DANCE

The Best of Hollywood (Mondays at 9:00 p.m.) kicks off a two-month salute to musicals in May. Leading off the festival is Singin' in the Rain. It stars Messers. Kelly and O'Connor and Miss Debbie Reynolds. On May 18, Judy Garland stars in Meet Me in St. Louis. And Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra star in Take Me Out to the Ballgame on May 25.

In June, Julie Andrews and Mary Tyler Moore are '20s flappers in Thoroughly Modern Millie (June 1). Ava Gardner stars in Show Boat (June 8), followed by Ziegfeld Follies (June 15), and Stage Door (June 22), starring Katharine Hepburn. The latter also kicks off our Katharine Hepburn Week, June 22 through June 29.

A Sunday Night Showcase World Premiere KENNY LOGGINS AND HIS "CONVICTION OF THE HEART"

In Kenny Loggins: Going Home, home is best described as "the country of the heart"—the natural splendor of the Grand Canyon. It's there that Loggins performs an informal concert (taped over two days), which features such old favorites as "Celebrate Me Home" as well as songs from his new album Leap of Faith.

The Grand Canyon provides a perfect setting for "Conviction of the Heart," the hit song from Leap of Faith that is rapidly becoming an environmental anthem.

"The thing about 'Conviction of the Heart' is that it is both the love song of a man and a song of his love for the earth," says Kenny Loggins. Kenny Loggins: Going Home also contains another hit from Leap of Faith: "The Real Thing."

Loggins started the song intending it for his daughter's christening, but the song insisted on becoming "a confrontation about the priorities in my life"—and took a year to finish.

Disney Channel Discovery IRON & SILK

It's not surprising that Mark Salzman stars in Iron & Silk. It's based on his best-selling memoir of the same title, about his two-year experience teaching English in China—where he studied wu shu (better known as kung-fu) with a famous teacher.

The film was one of the last made in China before the government crackdown on the Chinese student movement. "I wasn't surprised that something violent happened," Salzman says, "but by the timing. The students had already announced that their protests had failed, and were going to leave Tianahmen Square. Then came the crackdown—and I don't know of anybody who wasn't surprised by that. The timing was unbelievable."

World Premiere STING: WATCH EVERY MOVE HE MAKES

"It has to be honest-you can't lie in rock 'n' roll" says Sting. With the world television premiere of Sting at the Hollywood Bowl, rock fans are presented with a portrait of the artist in the guise of a careerretrospective concert. "Every Breath You Take," "Roxanne," "Message in a Bottle," "Soul Cages"—the songs make Sting's rise to international rock icon in a little over a decade seem foreordained. Sting has always decried songs that are empty of meaning; his quest has been to fuse the message with his medium. Whether the subject is romantic obsession, ecological destruction, or coming to terms, as in The Soul Cages, with the grief of family losses, Sting's lyrics—and music—reverberate in the mind after the last chords have faded.

Together: SUMMER CAMP '90s STYLE

Summer camps aren't what they used to be.

It's not that you can't find the traditional, sports-crafts-swim-and-sing-a-long-style kids camp anymore. You can. According to the American Camping Association, there are over 8,500 general interest kids' camps today. But now there is also a wide range of choices, with specialty camps focusing on everything from sports and theater arts to space, horse-back riding and aquatics.

Gary Abel of the American Camping Association says there are many camps that are incredibly specialized: a circus performance program in Pennsylvania that teaches high wire and other aerial feats (with a net, of course); a law camp in Florida that teaches teens how to argue a case; and a finance camp in Colorado that covers the stock market, investment strategies, and money management.

At the U.S. Space Camp in Alabama and Florida, students from grades four through 12 can pursue a variety of activities designed to stimulate their interest in mastering science and mathematics. Participants in the five-day programs can partake of space shuttle mission simulation, receive basic astronaut training, experience the 1/6 gravity chair, study satellite deployment, and use teamwork to accomplish experiments and other mock mission assignments. The Camp also offers an Adult Space Academy and a parent and child minispace camp weekend program.

Sound like work? Not according to director Edward Buckbee, who says the 20,000 campers a year find the program inspirational. The purpose of the camp isn't, of course, to turn the children into little astronauts in less than a week. It's to get them excited about learning more.

"We give the kids a broad look at a variety of subjects and an opportunity to experience so much more than they would normally encounter," says Buckbee. "To educate a child today takes more than the traditional classroom," he adds, suggesting that it is through experiences like space camp that children are motivated to go further.

Dick Billingsley, co-director of a sports and fitness camp in Los Angeles, agrees. Billingsley argues that camps that offer a wide range of different sports—rather than those that focus on one in particular—offer the children a chance to test and extend their skills. The great opportunity of a summer camp, he says, is that it can give children a chance to take a subject they're interested in and pursue it

QUESTIONS TO ASK THE CAMP DIRECTOR

With the options available, choosing a camp can be tough. The American Camping Association suggests you be sure to ask these questions:

- 1. What is the background of the director?
- 2. What is the camp's philosophy?
- 3. What is the ratio of counselors to campers?
- 4. What is the transportation system, if any?
- 5. What are the ages of the counselors?
- 6. What percentage of the staff return each year?
- 7. How are special needs handled?
- 8. Are references available?

THE BASIC THEORY BEHIND THE DRINK BOX.

Lock in nutrition and great taste. Lock out spoilage without artificial preservatives or refrigeration. And make it to-go. That's always been the theory behind the drink box.

But now, a good theory is getting even better. Drink boxes are starting to be recycled into useful products with pilot collection/recycling programs in over 350 schools in 13 states. It's even possible to turn them into useful things like tissues, writing paper and paper towels. While most communities don't have drink box recycling yet, we're working and you can help to bring it to more areas. For more information and recycling locations, write: Recycling Facts, P.O. Box 65495, Washington, D.C. 20035.

THE DRINK BOX SERVES YOU RIGHT.

THE ORIGINS OF SUMMER CAMP

It was in 1861 that Headmaster Frederick W. Gunn of the Gunnery School, a private boarding school in Connecticut, got the idea of taking pupils on a summer outing. He and his wife Abigail led a two-week trip to the Long Island Sound, for hiking, boating, sailing and fishing.

After several repeat performances, they established a permanent camp on an inland lake. And the camp idea soon spread. In 1922, former Harvard University President Charles W. Eliot said "The organized summer camp is the most important step in education that America has given the world."

further, expanding their interest even more. Billingsley adds that the broader the camp's focus, the less competitive it will be.

Shirley Walch, executive director of the Southern California Chapter of the American Camping Association, says that the key issue in looking at camps is to consider the specific needs of the child. "You have to ask yourself what your goal is," she says. "Is it to improve the child's skill to become a gold medalist or to help him have fun and develop social skills?"

For the 1992/93 Guide to Accredited Camps ($10.95), call the ACA bookstore at (800) 428-CAMP. It lists every ACA-accredited camp in the U.S. and includes a chart of over 50 of the most popular activities to help you locate camps with the programs that interest your child.

Kids Cooking POWER DINING WITH KIDS

The sitter just canceled and you have reservations at the hottest restaurant in town: What are you going to do?

Go for it. It's not uncommon to see young children dining at a nice restaurant. And by following the advice offered by professional cooks, restaurant owners and parents, you—and the other diners—can still have a good time.

You may want to call ahead, says one restaurant owner, and inform the staff that you will be joined by a very young guest. Doing so may cost you the power table in the premiere room, but when your toddler starts throwing bits of crudite's you may be thankful. And while almost every restaurant has some capability to provide high chairs and booster seats, it doesn't hurt to check before you leave home. Calling and moving your reservation up to an earlier hour is another good idea.

When ordering, move right past the sushi and the escargots and look for food that kids think of as normal. That fusilli with mushroom sauce could be turned into a butter pasta plate by asking the waiter to hold the sauce. And simple appetizers and side orders can prove a gold mine with young diners. In a Mexican restaurant, quesadillas-tortillas with cheese -can be a hit. At Italian restaurants, bruschetta, lightly herbed pizza-style bread sometimes served as an appetizer, is a possibility. Many dishes can be translated into kidfood by carefully checking the ingredients and asking to hold anything potentially offensive or strange. You may be able to have the staff hold the broccoli on the broccoli burger, for example.

When all else fails—when it's clear the menu and the child don't match—do not hesitate to ask if the cook could provide your child's favorite. Many cooks are happy to accommodate the younger set and some even go out of their way to turn a plain old peanut butter and jelly sandwich into a (somewhat) memorable dish.

It may be wise to order fewer courses for yourself than if you were dining without a child, say experienced parents. Unless your child is exceptional, don't count on a long, relaxed meal. This is the night to skip the soup and salad.

Even if you've ordered short, at some point before you are ready to leave the child will be finished—and probably bored. If you're prepared for this, you may gain five more minutes to finish that cafe au lait. Bring a small bag of quiet toys: small cars, crayons, and, if at all possible, a surprise item for the child to explore.

When you leave, tip well. Even if the service was average, the cleanup is typically more labor-intensive than it would be just with adults.

As you drive home, you'll probably realize that power dining with kids can work. The kids have the power, and you get to dine.

Parents can benefit from some tips from seasoned hiker Bill Faulkner, park ranger for Channel Islands National Park in Ventura, California. Faulkner says that if a child can walk on his own, hiking will work—as long as someone is prepared to carry the child part of the way. In fact, Faulkner says the younger a child starts hiking, the better.

Faulkner encourages families to find out what hikes are available in their areas, checking with local libraries, recreation departments, parks and the Chamber of Commerce. He also says parents should talk over the proposed hike with their kids, showing them the exact location of the trail on the map or discussing the interesting things they might encounter to build up pre-trip enthusiasm.

Unless you're carrying a pack of 25 pounds or more, sturdy tennis shoes will do for footwear. Faulkner advises that no matter what the climate, everyone should dress in layers and wear sunscreen, a hat, and thick socks to avoid blisters.

As for food and water, Faulkner urges parents to bring a good lunch—sandwich, fruit, juice and cookies—backed up by trail snacks such as raisins, peanuts and other high energy food, as well as plenty of water. Some children, he says, like to wear their own small day packs or fanny packs. If they do, their snack and beverage cravings can be managed without forcing everyone to stop and open the one big day pack.

Beyond food, Faulkner encourages families to bring fun tools to help enjoy the hike: binoculars, an inexpensive camera, a magnifying glass, a bug box to observe insects more graphically, plus a map and compass. "You can empower your child if you can teach him how to read a map, and a compass is a lot of fun," says Faulkner.

Hiking is also a good time to teach children environmental ethics, so Faulkner encourages families to take only pictures and leave only footprints, and to pack out any of the trash and other materials they take with them.

As for safety, Faulkner recommends bringing a simple first aid kit, and if possible, asking the park service before starting out if there is anything hikers need to be concerned about on the trip.

Sometimes parents who love hiking find the slow-paced stroll of children frustrating. Faulkner recommends that parents down-scale any expectations for accomplishing a long, challenging hike and instead just take joy in seeing their little ones learn to love setting out on the trail.

School THE DIRT ON SQUARE-FOOT GARDENING

For most families today, planning a garden, buying the seeds, digging, weeding, planting and harvesting makes a fun, relaxing summer hobby.

But according to Tim Parsons, director of Educational Programs for the National Gardening Association in Burlington, Vermont, it's much more. "Having a joint project and getting an opportunity to talk about nature—and life—is terrific," he says.

Parsons says that square-foot gardening offers a wide range of chances to explore science questions with children. "It's easy to ask, for example, what happens if we get too much rain, or if we plant in the shade, or if it gets too dry," he says. Parsons encourages parents to have their children keep a simple garden log that shows the seeds they planted, any soil care or fertilization they did and the yield obtained when harvesting.

One of the fun benefits of a city garden, says Parsons, is that if you've planted something like zucchini or tomatoes, you're bound to get more crop than you can eat. "It's a nice process of sharing for kids to get involved with the fruits of their labor, knowing how much care and nurturing went into their production, and giving them to friends and neighbors," he says.

What does it take to get started? Parsons suggests families visit any garden or hardware store and get small hand tools and a watering can. Good seed choices depend somewhat on the climate but best bets include green beans, peas, carrots, lettuce, radishes, and for larger gardens, pumpkins.

The spot should be considered carefully, says Parsons. Most vegetables require full sun, and a raised bed is a good idea if drainage is a problem. He suggests families start small so children can feel satisfied about what they are doing, or, in a large garden, give a child his or her very own space.

RICHARD & ROBERT SHERMAN

BROTHERS IN SONG

By Mr. Bonzai

It was absolutely hilarious," says songwriter Richard Sherman in describing the recording sessions for The Jungle Book. "We were screaming!" adds his brother Robert.

The Sherman Brothers are recounting tall tales of musical madness in the creation of one of Disney's best-loved animated features. Most folks are unaware of the fact that animation starts with the recording of the character voices, and in the case of Jungle Book, it all began with comedic songs penned by the Academy Award-winning team of Richard and Robert Sherman.

For the classic Disneyland-meets-Dixieland of "I Wanna Be Like You," the singers were Phil Harris as Baloo the bear and Louie Prima as the king of the orangutans. "It was pure fun," says Richard. "We had written nonsense scat lyrics for Phil, but he had his own idea—crazy nutty sounds. That's where the artistry comes in and that's where the characters were born. Every single syllable was analyzed by the animators—they even came down to the recording studio to sketch."

Historically, The Jungle Book is especially significant for two reasons: it was the last animated feature personally produced by Walt Disney, and it was the first feature in which actors' voices so strongly influenced the style and development of the characters.

Surprisingingly enough, it was Sterling Holloway, the gentle voice of the newly popular Winnie the Pooh, whose breathy antics brought life to the character of Kaa the python in the song "Trust In Me." The snarling snobbery of George Sanders spoke for Shere Khan, the menacing tiger who propels the story of Mowgli, the boy raised by wolves.

Sebastian Cabot gave us the voice of Bagheera, the arrogant but good-hearted panther who watches over the boy.

The original stories of Rudyard Kipling have a dark tone, quite unlike the Disney feature. "Walt called us to his office one day," says Richard, "and told us to forget everything we knew about Kipling's Jungle Book." Robert adds,

"You see, we were known as musical troubleshooters, and everyone was afraid that this film would become too serious. Walt said, 'We're going to do it our way and we're going to have some fun. I want you boys to write some songs and dream up some funny ideas."

And dream they did! It's impossible to imagine this telling of the story without the songs which define the characters and the freewheeling spirit of the film. Save for "The Bare Necessities," which was written by their friend Terry Gilkyson, all the tunes came from the animated brains of The Shermans. For example, ponderous pachyderms become a troop of preposterous elephants in "Colonel Hathi's March."

"We just created these comic soldiers who drilled for the love of drilling," says Robert.

A true challenge was the scene where vultures await Mowgli, the boy alone in the jungle. "What could be more obnoxious than vultures?" asks Richard. "This could have been a very low point in the picture." "So we came up with friendly vultures singing as a barbershop quartet," adds Robert. "And then we gave them accents like The Beatles."

For twenty-eight films, countless television shows-even theme-park attractions-The Sherman Brothers were Disney's main music men.

Annette & The Beach Boys (then only known as an up-and-coming band) recorded the title tune for the film The Monkey's Uncle. "We needed a little backup group for Annette," recalls Richard.

Their new album, The Sherman Brothers: Walt Disney's Supercalifragilistic Songwriting Team, to be released May 13, features, among its many gems, the last recording of the debonaire Maurice Chevalier.

Kisses and Oscars for Julie Andrews and The Shermans for the Best Song Score, as well as Best Song for "Chim-Chim-Cher-ee," in the 1964 feature film Mary Poppins.

Reflecting on their time with Walt Disney, Robert Sherman feels that they were very lucky to work "with Walt, who had the taste and the strength to get the best from everybody."

The happy results are "That's What Friends Are For." "It was really meant as a tribute," explains Richard. "The Beatles were the greatest rock team that ever hit the planet." (Years later, Ringo Starr would score big with "You're Sixteen"—yet another Sherman Brothers song.)

It was in the early days of rock and roll that The Sherman Brothers began their enduring musical relationship with Walt Disney. In 1958, a little song of theirs, "Tall Paul," was recorded by Mouseketeer Annette Funicello and climbed the charts, selling 700,000 copies. This led to a meeting with Walt and more hits for Annette, including the title tune for the film The Monkey's Uncle, recorded with an up-and-coming surf band.

"We needed a little backup group for Annette," recalls Richard. "We'd heard some really good harmonies and suggested The Beach Boys to Walt." "It was amazing," says Robert. "Walt just said, 'Get the Beach Boys.' We worked with them for about three days. They didn't read music but Brian Wilson heard it all in his head and sang out each part for the group to learn. He was a genius."

It was in 1964 with Mary Poppins that The Sherman Brothers took their true artistry to film. "We'd had some success, but this was our chance to do a major piece of work," recalls Richard. "Sometimes you really pull something out of your soul, as in 'Feed The Birds.' That was Walt's all-time favorite of ours—we used to get together every Friday afternoon and he often asked us to play it for him. Mary Poppins opened up our career and then Walt gave us a number of musicals. He was an instinctive man and it all started with his confidence in us."

The film earned the Oscar for Best Song Score and "Chim-Chim-Cher-ee" received the Oscar for Best Song. The Sherman Brothers would go on to write music for a total of 28 Disney films, many Disney TV shows, and also themepark classics such as "It's a Small World" and Disneyland's "The Enchanted Tiki Room," the world's first Audio-Animatronics attraction.

Many of their greatest songs have just been collected in a new album from Walt Disney Records: The Sherman Brothers: Walt Disney's Supercalifragilistic Songwriting Team. Worth special mention are renditions by Louis Armstrong, the very last recording of Maurice Chevalier, and a never-before-released session starring Walt himself and The Shermans singing "There's A Great Big Beautiful Tomorrow."

Richard reflects on the new collection, and on The Jungle Book: "It's pure enjoyment—you just get a complete smile on your face. We were very lucky to work with such talented artists and..." Robert finishes, "With Walt, who had the taste and the strength to get the best from everybody.

Alan Thicke and Jay Underwood return as Dr. Jonas Carson and SHOT QUITE HUMAN 1007 Alan Thicke and Jay

Back in 1987, Alan Thicke and Jav Underwood were hard at work on a Disney Channel Premiere Film entitled Not Ouite Human. Based on Seth McEvov's series of popular young adult novels, the film chronicled the adventures of an inventor-scientist and the android son he had created. "The fathers portraved in Disney films have always been ones I idolized," said Thicke at the time. "So you can imagine how pleased I was when cast as Dr. Carson." And Jay Underwood added that his "was a great role-one that I am having fun playing."

What neither knew at the time was that their collaboration was, to paraphrase the closing line of a classic Hollywood movie, the beginning of a beautiful friendship. For Not Quite Human went on to become one of the most popular movie ever made for The Disney Channel, and inspired a 1989 sequel. That movie, Not Quite Human II, also proved popular, earning its place among our top 10 original films.

And now the two are back in the continuing adventures of Dr. Carson and Chip. Of course, this time around, things are a little different. First, Still Not Quite Human boasts an array of dazzling special effects to help bring the story to life. And while the first two movies dealt with Chip trying to become more human, in the new film it's Chip who discovers, after Dr. Carson's mysterious disappearance while attending a scientific conference, that something is now "not quite human" about dear old dad.

Jay Underwood shares the audience's enthusiasm for the films. While not attributing their popularity to any one character (especially the one he happens to play!), Underwood feels that Chip is likable because of his openness and vulnerability. "When Chip meets assumes they are good until he finds out otherwise. It would be a lot better world if more people were like that."

As such statements indicate, there is a lot of Jay Underwood in his character Chip Carson. But being typecast is nothing new. "I always get the nice guy," he says ruefully. A recent exception to his roles as a nice guy was his opportunity to play the punk boyfriend in the movie Uncle Buck, opposite John Candy.

Of course, a significant role in Underwood's career was one that neither film nor television audiences have ever seen—or will ever see, for that matter. He played the Big Bad Wolf in a sixth grade production of Little Red Riding Hood with his sister playing the unfortunate Miss Hood. Underwood recalls tagging along to his sister's acting classes, "just to see what it was like." The result, by the time Underwood was in high school, was his first big part, co-starring with Jon Voight and JoBeth Williams in Desert Bloom. It was "the greatest moment in my life" Underwood says-and then admits he had no idea how well-known his co-stars were.

Today, each new role for Jay Underwood means he's one step closer to achieving his ultimate goal: owning a ranch in the wilds of Montana, where he can indulge his passion for fly-fishing, leaving only to play important roles.
While he acknowledges that this is indeed a tall order, that fact doesn't faze him. Like Chip Carson, his android alter ego, Underwood intends to keep pushing until he achieves what he set out to do.
Perhaps there's something to being typecast as a nice guy after all.

Alan Thicke, of course, is well known not only for his work in the Not Quite Human movies but for his role in the network sitcom Growing Pains. And that's not to mention the reputation that Thicke has made for himself as a writer/producer, standup comedian, and composer of television theme songs.

In person, Thicke's wicked wit is apparent when he discusses some of the less successful moments in his life and career. "I always believed that part of Elvis lived inside of me," he says about his short-lived career as a rock 'n' roll star in his native Canada. "Unfortunately, it was the part that liked donuts." Thicke's equally candid and hilarious about his "fainting out" of medical school, which he entered after dropping out of college—where he was studying to be a minister. As for his ill-fated attempt at being a late-night talk show host—which coincided with problems in his personal life—Thicke quips: "It was a difficult year. I was divorced and cancelled on the same day."

But rather than convince him to retreat, such roadblocks spurred Thicke on to try new things. The failure of his talk show, for example, propelled him into acting. Likewise, the diabetes of one of his sons led to his involvement with the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation—and the creation of the "Alan Thicke Center for Diabetes Research" at the University of Western Ontario in Canada.

For Thicke, variety is the spice of life. In addition to spending time with his sons Brennan and Robin, he enjoys hockey, softball, hiking, tennis, skiing and biking. In fact, Thicke's love of the great outdoors came in handy during breaks in the shooting of Still Not Quite Human. While in Vancouver, both Thicke and Underwood indulged their interests in fishing, and Thicke and other members of the cast also tried their hands at kayaking, and that ever popular sport of trolling the hotel lobby for any hot stars who might be staying there. They landed Bob Hope.

The relationship between the actors—and the spirit of fun shared by the cast and crew on- and off-camera—shines through in Still Not Quite Human. Indeed, it's been the hallmark of the series and has led to the success of its two predecessors. So settle back and prepare to enjoy more good times as Dr. Jonas Carson and his son Chip set off for a third episode of their "still not quite human" adventures.

LOOKING

he comedic genius of Jerry Lewis casts a giant shadow. To describe him as a show business legend is to fall shy of the mark. He is the only comedian, after all, to have been nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize (for his philanthropic work, particularly with the crusade against muscular dystrophy). For his vision as a filmmaker, Lewis is revered in Europe. France regards him as its own American landmark, bestowing upon him the medal of the Legion of Honor. And for the generation that followed in his footsteps, Lewis represents the summit of the comedic arts.

With the world premiere of Martin & Lewis: Their Golden Age of Comedy, subscribers of The Disney Channel can partake of a measure of the Lewis legacy. The three-part special, airing in May, June, and July, focuses in the main on Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis's remarkable live-television series of the '50s—a wealth of comic sketches and routines not seen in four decades. (In addition to Lewis recounting his memories of those early days, comedians Martin Short, Chevy Chase, and Howie Mandel also make special guest appearances.)

But mastery does not come easy. For Jerry Lewis, the lessons began quite literally in the cradle. "The expression 'born in a trunk," Lewis acknowledges, "I think was devised for people like Donald O'Connor, Peggy Ryan, Judy Garland, Jackie Coogan, and myself. In the case of my dad, he was playing burlesque at the time. I was born at the Newark Memorial Hospital, which was about five blocks from the burlesque theater."

By the time Jerry Lewis was five, his father had ordered him his first tux—and Lewis was appearing onstage with his father. (Lewis's mother "was a brilliant, brilliant musician, a pianist who accompanied my father when he was playing legit—meaning the Borscht Circuit.") By the time he was 10, "when I wasn't performing with my mother and dad, I was a busboy at the hotel my dad was working at in the Borscht Belt." (The Borscht Circuit or Belt were the theaters and nightclubs found at the Jewish summer resorts in the Catskill Mountains.)

about his salad days—and a three-part special, a world premiere that chronicles the golden era of Martin & Lewis.

"The Borscht Circuit taught me all I had to know about the human condition, and about performing. My mother and dad were my teachers. The spine of my being was built out of those conditions...of being born in a trunk."

As a member of that world, Jerry Lewis applied himself with diligence. "I watched everything," he says. "I had to see everybody twice. I would watch first to enjoy them, and then I would watch to see how they got it done—that was my education."

Lewis's education would stand him in good stead—whether it was making the transition from stage to television and film ("You had to take everything down. That was confining. It was education and application") or creating, along with Dean Martin, one of the greatest comedy teams of all time.

And even there Lewis was learning and applying—particularly the lessons he absorbed from the extraordinary duo of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy—and, to a lesser degree, from Bud Abbott and Lou Costello. "What I learned from the teams that aided Dean and I was stuff that you don't begin to know but you've learned. When I was discussing things that Dean and I should do, I didn't know I was calling on Laurel and Hardy, who were the premiere team for reaction, as opposed to Abbott and Costello, who were magnificent in time," here Lewis snaps his fingers, "brilliant in time.

"Laurel and Hardy had the timing, suffice it to say," Lewis continues, "of geniuses. But their timing involved...'look in the camera...beat...beat...beat...turn back to the partner...wait for the line...turn to the audience...think about it...go back for another reaction.' It was constant animation. It was beautiful words and mime.

"Between the two of us we were pretty good teachers," Lewis recalls of those early days with Dean Martin. Looking back on the sketches from their '50s series, Lewis says, "I loved it when it worked. I loved it when they were on the seesaw...when Jerry was a character and Dean was always Dean. Dean never changed from Dean. Jerry did [change into a character]. Dean had to always maintain as the straight man."

Joining Jerry Lewis on Martin & Lewis: Their Golden Age of Comedy are Martin Short, Chevy Chase and Howie Mandel, who offer testimonials to the team's brilliance. But does Jerry Lewis see his influence in another generation of comedians?

"Martin Short said a funny thing to me," Lewis says. "He said Steve Martin had called him on the telephone and said, 'Do you realize we're all doing Jerry Lewis?' Which is a lovely compliment. I know what he means—they're picking up on an energy that I had—that I still have—an energy when I was nine years old. And the kid in my performance has to be alive, otherwise the performance doesn't work."

Working on Martin & Lewis: Their Golden Age of Comedy, and seeing the material of the '50s has proved elegiac for Lewis: "When I first saw the rough material I relived the times," he says. "It was a wonderful period for us. We were both 40 years younger. We were at the height of wild abandonment. And I saw that watching the material. These two guys who were crazy in love with one another and with one another's ability.

"It's just magic, absolute magic. And it will never, ever be reproduced. This is the only time you will ever see two men in that kind of time warp of love, affection, and talent. And it's all there in those specials."

"Please tuck us in, Mommy!"

ELIZABETH & HER BABY BEAR

She's an enchanting child, gentle and innocent as the moonlight. Tuck her in for the evening with her cuddly friend and tell them a bedtime story...perhaps their favorite, "Goldilocks and the Three Bears." Then bid them both sweet dreams. This charming pair will warm your heart and enhance your treasured collection.

Exquisitely Crafted Collector Doll

Created by internationally celebrated artist Patricia Rose, "Elizabeth" is a fine bisque porcelain collector doll of incredible beauty. Her golden hair falls in soft curls about her exquisite hand-painted face. Her wide, expressive green eyes are inset and fringed with natural lashes. Her hands and feet are finely crafted with realistic detail, her arms and legs naturally posable. Cradling her baby bear in one arm, "Elizabeth" looks up at you adoringly, silently saying 'I love you, Mommy.'

Collector's Quality...Excellent Value

"Elizabeth" is an extraordinary collector's value, commemorating the Treasury Collection's inaugural year. At the exceptional price of $39, she compares in quality to dolls costing twice as much. This imported first edition will be individually numbered and limited to 100 firing days. You may now commission "Elizabeth," complete with her companion bear, numbered certificate of authenticity, display stand and collector's box. Simply complete the Commission Reservation below and return it today. You need send no money at this time. If you are not completely satisfied within one year, you may return your doll for a full refund.

The beloved biblical story delightfully portrayed in a fine porcelain plate by award-winning children's artist Bill Bell.

A new beginning. As two by two, the animals joyfully parade out of the ark. Kangaroos kick up their heels...monkeys march... snakes slither. And high above, a glorious rainbow stretches across the horizon, a brilliant promise that never again will floods be sent to destroy all living creatures.

Renowned children's artist Bill Bell creates this magical scene from the biblical story of "Noah's Ark" in his first-ever collector plate, "Two By Two."

Crafted of fine porcelain, hand-numbered and bordered in 24 karat gold, this imported limited edition collector plate also bears the artist's signature mark on its reverse side.

Priced at just $29.50, this edition will be closed forever after just 45 firing days. Available exclusively from The Franklin Mint, Franklin Center, PA 19091-0001

"The Thinker" shown smaller than actual 3½" size. True porcelain. A new $16.60 limited-edition plate by Donald Zolan.

One of tomorrow's $1,000 plates?

The new "The Thinker" miniature plate is the first plate about life's little ups and downs by Donald Zolan, America's favorite living plate artist.

Living Lies p. 45

"The Thinker" shows a little boy struggling with some big thoughts. Donald Zolan says, "Growing up isn't all fun and games and sometimes a little guy needs to sit down and think things through." We don't know what's going on with this boy, and this mystery adds depth and interest to the picture.

Its prospects look bright because Donald Zolan's miniatures have risen faster in value than any other set of collector's plates since plate collecting began almost 100 years ago. All of the first ten have gone up over five times in value and one has gone up over 59 times, from $12.50 to $760. Because "The Thinker" is so daring and so different and so appealing, it could be one of the first Zolan plates to top $1,000.

It comes in its own gift box, with its own display stand, its own certificate, and its own story by Zolan about the art. One-year money-back warranty. 19-day firing schedule. Please order now to obtain at issue price.

WHO SAYS IT'S HARD TO FIND A GOOD BABY SITTE

Introducing the built-in child seat.

Holds children from 20 to 40 pounds.

One side converts to a booster seat.

Available only on the '92 Voyager.

When it comes to dealing with children. Plymouth's design team is showing remarkable restraint.

Introducing the world's first built-in child seat, now available on the new 1992 Plymouth Voyager.

It only looks like The car company that was first with the minivan driver's air bag is first again with what may be the most significant safety advance of the decade.*

This is safety made simple. Just push back the headrest, lower the seat cushion and the child seat's five-point safety harness appears. The same procedure on the adjacent seat reveals a second child seat, or booster seat equipped with three-point restraints. Tighten the belts and raise the seat cushions back into place and you have a regular bench seat again.

Your child's safety could depend on your ability to install a child seat properly. Yet studies reveal that traditional child seats are incorrectly installed an alarming 22% of the time. And 6% of them are not even fastened to the vehicle at all.

So we've eliminated the need for child seat installation by building the seat right into the vehicle. And we designed the entire bench seat so that it can be easily adjusted to safely and comfortably accommodate everyone from toddlers to adults.† Because if a vehicle isn't safe for your entire family, it isn't a family vehicle.

Of course, the best way to survive an accident is not to get into one. So in addition to advanced restraint systems and an air bag, Voyager has available all-wheel drive and 4-wheel anti-lock brakes for added safety.

And our Owner's Choice Protection Plan lets you choose either our 7 year/70,000 mile powertrain warranty, or 3 year/36,000 mile bumper to bumper warranty. No other car company in the world offers you such flexibility in choosing the protection that's right for you.

So for purchase or Gold Key Plus/leasing information, visit your local Chrysler-Plymouth dealer. Or just call 1-800-PLYMOUTH. And discover the minivan that takes care of vour children.
